We hold learning in the highest regard. It's a critical part of what we do with clients, and it needs to be a critical part of Groupaya the organization.

In order to create more space to learn from each other, we've decided to start doing informal brown bag sessions every Thursday at noon at Fiore Caffe in San Francisco. And since we're all about learning with community, we figured we'd open these up to anyone who'd like to participate.

If you're in the San Francisco Bay Area and you'd like to participate, please leave a comment below so we know how many to expect, and come join us! It will be a great way to meet all three of us in the flesh and to learn with us.

I'll be leading this Thursday's (November 10) brown bag in a session I'm tentatively calling, "Saving The World Through Better Note-Taking." I'm going to be sharing some ideas I've had for a long-time about the role of artifacts in effective collaboration, followed by what I hope will be some rousing discussion.

This will also be somewhat of a practice run for me, as I'll be doing a similar brown bag in Portland and possibly Seattle next week. If you're in either of those cities and would like to participate or simply meet up next week, please note that in the comments below as well.

Hope to see you at our brown bag this Thursday!
